PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Dear friends of the college:

Whittier College's fortunes have ebbed and flowed over the years. Never a wealthy institution, the college nonetheless has continually offered a "gold-plated" education to numerous generations of students. Our dedicated faculty and staff held on through lean times, indeed, performing magnificently even when our physical plant demanded immediate attention and our enrollment lagged behind our projections. Against this background, it is an unqualified joy to peruse this year's Honor Roll of Donors and a particular delight to share with you the successes of the first year of the public phase of our historic capital campaign, Endowing the Tradition.

You may recall that I last wrote in this space about the importance of annual giving. We just closed the books on the 1996-97 fund-raising year, our best ever.

The generosity and commitment reflected in the Honor Roll list enable Whittier College to attract and keep the best and brightest students, regardless of their financial wherewithal.

This issue of The Rock includes news of several openings we have celebrated or will soon acknowledge. First, of course, is the opening of the new Whittier Law School campus in Costa Mesa. Orange County District Attorney Mike Capizzi headlined the August 23 event, which received full coverage in all the area newspapers. The project was completed on time and within the approved budget, practically unheard-of these days. We now have a facility equal to the talents and capacities of the outstanding faculty that Dean John A. FitzRandolph has recruited over the years. We have every reason to anticipate that Whittier Law School will thrive in Orange County.

On the college campus, the George Allen Fitness Center has opened its doors. The newly renovated space and state-of-the-art equipment promise to enhance both athletic recruiting and the general quality of life at Whittier College.

We received news during the summer that the James Irvine Foundation would fund part of our proposed Multicultural Center. The center will build on the well-recognized accomplishments of the Center of Mexican American Affairs, led for many years by Martin Ortiz, and will expand its programs for the benefit of all underrepresented groups on campus.

The major campaign goal of renovating and transforming Wardman Library is much closer to reality as a result of a $5 million gift—the largest in the College's history—from a Los Angeles foundation. As we raise funds

TO THE EDITOR

JOIN THE TEAM

This letter is directed to the thousands of alumni who were active participants in, or enthusiastic observers of, Whittier's athletic teams through the years.

Much has been written in recent months about the elimination of major team sports at public and private colleges and universities in Southern California. We bemoan this trend, for we all recognize the role intercollegiate athletics plays in the development of spirit and enthusiasm on campus and the important values learned through competitive sports—values like leadership, teamwork and sportsmanship, to name a few.

Purple & Gold, through membership dues, special events held throughout the year, and our annual golf tournament, raises significant funds to help sustain the scholar-athletes of Whittier College. (In the process, we have a heck of a good time!) We are confident that our support is making a difference as the college rebuilds its athletic programs and facilities to levels of accomplishment of which we may all be proud.

Our membership drive for the 1997–98 year kicked off during the summer. We hope you will agree to join our team. After all, you have nothing to lose, and you and the entire Poet sports program have a whole lot to gain. And to those continuing members of Purple & Gold who want to be more active and have some fun in helping guide our group into the future, please contact us through the Alumni Office. Thanks for your consideration, and GO POETS!

for the rest of the project, we will develop the initial conception of the new Information and Technology Center more fully.

Also this fall, both Naylor and Hoover Halls are undergoing transformation. As you may recall, we are modernizing and refurbishing the Hoover Hall auditorium, which we will rename Lautrup-Ball Cinema to acknowledge the substantial gift of trustee Dolores L. Ball '33.

Naylor, of course, will be completely renovated for its reincarnation as the home of the Modern Languages and Literatures Department. Along with "media smart" classrooms, Naylor will contain language labs and faculty offices. The return to duty of our signature building will occasion a good deal of toasting, I suspect.

In addition to the capital projects, raising funds for endowed chairs has been a key goal of the campaign. We have already funded and filled the Fletcher Jones Chair in Molecular Genetics; Professor David Bourgaize, the chairholder, joined the faculty in September. Before the campaign ends, we will have ten such chairs. Indeed, we have substantially completed the campaign for several of those chairs.

In sum, Whittier College has rarely been in the position in which we now find ourselves. We have just welcomed the biggest freshman class in 25 years, exceeding our enrollment goal without compromising on quality. Solvent at last, eyeing strategies to promote prosperity, the college can actively shape its future and dream big. We hope you will share in the excitement (as well as the hard work) as we envision our second century and celebrate its realization.

ON CAMPUS

GOOD NEWS FROM U.S. NEWS

Whittier College is second in the nation among liberal arts colleges in campus diversity, according to U.S. News & World Report's annual "America's Best Colleges" guidebook, published in conjunction with the magazine's popular college rankings issue.

Latino students at Whittier comprised 32 percent of the undergraduate population in 1996-97, the academic year on which the survey results were based. Whittier came in second in the diversity rankings to Occidental College in Los Angeles.

Whittier also rose in the overall U.S. News rankings this year, moving from last year's fourth-tier position (colleges ranked 120th to 160th of 160 listed) to the third tier.

Not all the news was good, however. In a guidebook section on paying for college, Whittier ranked first among national liberal arts colleges in the amount of debt carried by its graduating class.

"Whittier has a tradition of providing opportunities to deserving students who might otherwise find a college education out of their reach," said President Ash. "This tradition brings us a wonderfully diverse student body, but many of our students rely heavily on financial aid, including loans."

NEWS IN BRIEF

The overall rankings appeared in the magazine's August 25 issue. The college guidebook, which includes the diversity and debt surveys as well as the overall rankings, is available in bookstores through June of 1998. ■

WHITTIER ENJOYS MOST SUCCESSFUL FUND-RAISING YEAR EVER

When the books closed on the 1996-97 fiscal year, the total in the gifts column was $9.8 million—a record for Whittier College.

"Our alumni and friends are really stepping up to meet the challenges of our capital campaign," said Joseph M. Zanetta, vice president for advancement. "We announced the campaign one year ago, and we've already achieved more than 60 percent of our $70-million goal. Now the challenge is to continue building on the momentum of last year, and set a new record in 1997-98."

Among the campaign gifts that pushed the totals to new heights were a $1.5 million grant from the Ahmanson Foundation for restoration of Naylor Hall, $500,000 from the Fletcher Jones Foundation, and generous pledge payments on new endowed chairs. ■

AND THE WINNER IS...

NOTED & QUOTED

A sampling of Whittier College and Whittier Law School people in the news.

KCBS-TV (LOS ANGELES)

President James L. Ash, Jr. appeared on the Sept. 19 morning news, discussing the successful progress of The Campaign for Whittier College.

NATIONAL PUBLIC RADIO

Fred Bergerson, professor of political science, was interviewed on a June broadcast of "All Things Considered" about students' perceptions of Watergate. Bergerson told program host Linda Wertheimer that students today know Watergate was "an important scandal and a blot on the president's record, but they tend to contrast his failure in domestic policy with his achievements in foreign policy."

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Charles Hill, professor of psychology, discussed the challenges of rebuilding damaged relationships in a June story. "Happy couples and sad couples both have conflict, but they deal with it differently," Hill said. "The happy couples emphasize the positive. The unhappy couples tend to do tit for tat on the negative, and they further perpetuate the problem rather than resolving it."

TIME MAGAZINE

A June story on the growth of Internet gambling featured I. Nelson Rose, professor of law. "I get two calls a day,"

Rose was quoted as saying, "one from the media, the other from someone who wants to set up shop on the 'Net. There's a feeling that they're getting in on the ground floor of the next TV." Rose was also quoted in a July New York Times story about a Native American tribe's Internet gambling site.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

In an August story about the federal budget agreement, Carol (Cox) Wait '70, director of the nonprofit Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, was quoted. She said the accord creates additional entitlement programs such as tax credits for college students, which Wait described as "an entitlement program disguised as a tax cut."

PARENTS MAGAZINE

Judith Wagner, professor of education and director of the Broadoaks Children's School, discussed ways parents can help their five- and six-year-olds develop social skills in the magazine's September issue. "By age 5, many children have discovered that they can bestow or withhold friendship to gain status," she said. "Part of being this age is feeling that something is more special if only certain kids get to do it." Wagner was also featured in a story on the smartest ways to help children with homework in the September issue of Parenting magazine.

ON CAMPUS

CLASS OF '57 MAKES A GIFT TO ALL ALUMNI

The 40th reunion of the Class of 1957 was marked by presentations—of achievement awards to alumni, and of honors to former professors C. Milo Connick, F. Beach Leighton and Eugene S. Mills for "making a difference." But the Class of '57's biggest presentation was made to all alumni.

In honor of their reunion, the class decided to give Whittier College a lasting gift—an Alumni House on campus. At press time, the class had committed more than $486,000 toward its $750,000 goal. The facility will be a "home away from home" for the college's 18,000 alumni, providing meeting rooms for alumni groups and offices for the alumni relations staff. ■

THE WEB IS MIGHTIER THAN THE PEN

Since A Season of Ponies was published in 1964, Zilpha (Keatley) Snyder '48 has written 35 books for children and young adults—stories, picture books for very young children, and even poetry. She's received countless honors, including three Newberry Awards (for The Egypt Game, The Headless Cupid and The Witches of Worm) and two Christopher Medals from the Catholic Educators of America. Her books have been translated and published in more than 11 foreign countries, including Germany, Iceland, Taiwan and Italy, and five books are available on tape.

This prolific career generates more than awards—Snyder gets fan mail, lots of fan mail. If she tried to answer all her mail personally, Snyder figures she might have to give up writing books, but not answering and possibly hurting a fan's feelings just isn't her style. So her husband, Larry '50, came to the rescue with the almost perfect '90s solution—a home page on the World Wide Web, accessible at <http://www.microweb.com/l Snyder/>.

"It's been lots of fun and very gratifying," Snyder said, "but many of my readers are a bit young (9 to 13 years old) to have access to the Internet and e-mail. Most of my e-mail tends to be from older 'kids'—high school age up through the middle 30s—who were fans in the past and who, on finding my Web page, decide somewhat belatedly to tell me so."

Eugene Carson, Sr. has been involved in the building industry for 46 years. He currently lives in Fair Oaks, Calif., where he tends to his ranch and keeps a hand in his company, Kit Contractors, Inc. His son, Eugene Carson, Jr. '66, is president, and is now working on a subdivision in Elk Grove that is part of the Laguna West master-planned community.

Joanna (Craun) Cochran moved to Yorba Linda, Calif., and says she now "has room for the 10 grandchildren to spend time with us—all at the same time."

After a career spent teaching in Europe, Rex Ellington is retired and lives in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Betty (Forbes) Weigel is verger at All Saints Episcopal Church in Pasadena, Calif. She spent some time in England, Scotland and Wales this summer.

Diana (Jones) Sherick is teaching at her church school in Lakeport, Calif.

John Kelly is retired and writes that he now "donates most of my income to worthy organizations such as travel agencies, golf courses and HMOs."

Bob '50 and Jeanne (Leonard) Clay Plank are both active volunteers with the American Iris Society. Jeanne is secretary for the national group while Bob is pro bono legal counsel for the national board of directors and is photo coordinator for the AIS Quarterly Bulletin.

Sally (Martin) Callahan continues her work as a livestock appraiser. Her work takes her all over the U.S. Her husband, Gordon '47, is in a nursing home with Alzheimer's disease.

Robert E. Meyer retired from teaching and lives in Turlock, Calif.

Bob and Pattie (Paget) Casjens are both retired and enjoying reading, gardening, community service and travel. Their most recent trip was to Hong Kong, China, Korea and Japan.

Cliff Sjostrom and his wife, Lee, enjoy traveling, reading and relaxing, and visiting their grandchildren.

JoAnn (Smith) and Don Wilson '50 enjoy traveling and golf when they are not spending the summer at Lake Almansor with their Whittier friends.

Tracing his roots, Bob Slaght discovered that his ancestors "arrived in America in 1652 and co-founded Kingston, N.Y, making him a 12th-generation Slaght," he writes. He has had angioplasty and bypass surgery but is now "doing great with a new diet, exercise and a positive outlook."

HIS CAREER PATH HITS NEW HEIGHTS

Mike Westmoreland never thought business administration would be this much fun. After graduating from Whittier in May of 1991, he joined Disneyland as a cost accountant in October, and it's been a steep ride up—and down, and up, and down, and up—the corporate ladder since then.

Westmoreland is attractions manager for Space Mountain and the Matterhorn Bobsled. In charge of the day-to-day operations of both rides, he manages five assistant managers and anywhere from 100 to 250 hourly employees who operate the popular roller coasters.

"Everything that could or does happen on the rides is my responsibility," he said. "I have to see that they look the way they are supposed to look and perform the way they should. Future plans, any possible changes or improvements in the rides, these are my responsibility."

In his six-year rise to the top at the "Happiest Place on Earth," Westmoreland served as a cost accountant for both the park and the Disneyland hotels, as a capital accountant tracking costs for projects and production, as a financial analyst and as senior business analyst before getting his current job last year.

"What I do now is make sure that any time you take the rides, you have a great time," he explained. "I love it—and it sure beats crunching numbers all day."

A WISH IS GRANTED

The largest gift in Whittier College history will meet a most urgent need.

by Kristin Tranquada

In 1961, long-time Whittier College supporters Aubrey and Bonnie Wardman announced a gift that helped the college fulfill a long-held dream—a permanent library building. More than 35 years later, a Los Angeles foundation has stepped forward with a grant that will fulfill an equally urgent need—updating and expansion of that library building for future Poet generations.

“A NEW WORLD ... OF PHYSICAL BEAUTY”

The Bonnie Bell Wardman Library, completed in 1964 at a cost of about $1 million, is certainly a conversation piece, if not exactly a beloved campus landmark. The concrete edifice, sometimes likened by campus wags to a cheese grater on stilts, looks completely out of place among the red tile roofs and white stucco walls of the buildings that surround it. But in 1964, the Bonnie Bell Wardman Library was considered the coolest place on campus.

“Any visitor to the library these days ... gains the immediate impression that here is a new world not only of physical beauty, but of scholarship and creative thought,” gushed an article in a 1964 issue of The Rock. “Light, color, space ... are so artistically present in balanced measures.” Wardman Library was sleek. It was modern. And perhaps most important to the students of 1964, it was a real, permanent library building—the first one they’d ever had at Whittier.

“IT WAS HEAVEN”

In the years before the Wardmans made their gift, the library occupied a variety of makeshift locations—a remodeled women’s dormitory, the upper floors of Mendenhall, a former art classroom in Founders Hall. For Whittier students, faculty and alumni, a permanent library building was a dream come true.

HISTORICAL PHOTOS: WARDMAN LIBRARY COLLECTION

The third floor of Mendenhall served as the reading room for the last of the makeshift libraries. The bow-tied man behind the counter in this 1958 photo is Librarian Benjamin G. Whitten, who oversaw the move to Wardman Library.

The $5 million grant (from a foundation that has requested anonymity for now) is the largest gift the college has ever received, and will be used to expand and remodel the 33-year-old Bonnie Bell Wardman Library. Plans call for adding a variety of new electronic information resources, as well as more space for study, special collections and new acquisitions. Also on the to-do list are seismic retrofitting of the aging facility and reconfiguring its outdated floor plan.

Students converse in one of a series of staged 1964 photographs designed to show off the library's dramatic exterior by night.

"The new building was heaven," remembers Philip M. O'Brien '61, Whittier's current college librarian, who was an assistant librarian when Wardman Library opened. "The previous library in Mendenhall was crowded and difficult for the user. All the bound periodicals were in the basement and had to be carried up to the third floor by student workers. Some of the stacks were on the second level, and others were on the balcony."

Wardman Library was a '60s-style showplace, a rectangular box elevated on pylons and reached by a glass-enclosed staircase. Its floor-to-ceiling windows were overlaid with metal latticework to screen the sun (producing the aforementioned cheese-grater effect).

Available space was more than double that in the Mendenhall library—enough space to prompt some concern that the new library had been overbuilt for the college's needs. Benjamin Whitten, the college librarian, set the doubters straight. "Far from worrying about the large amount of unused shelf space, I am of the exact opposite view," he declared. "Please remember, we built for the future."

UNMET NEEDS

Nearly 35 years into that future, the unused shelf space is long gone, and the very nature of libraries has changed dramatically. Today's student and faculty researchers require access to technology that was almost beyond imagination when Wardman Library opened. Then there's the problem of space for the library's collections, which have grown substantially over the years, even with often-limited acquisition budgets. Once again, Whittier finds itself making do with a library that's significantly less than ideal.

Many recent graduates remember going to the library as more of a chore than an adventure. "It was a good place to study and gossip, but not great for research," said Betsy Kemp '93, now a project coordinator in the Chicago office of McKinsey and Company, a management consulting firm. "If I had a paper to write, I'd usually have go to other colleges' libraries to find the on-line journals and other materials I needed. It was one of the reasons I needed a car at school."

A HISTORIC GIFT

The Wardman Library expansion was at the top of the college's priority list for the capital campaign launched last October. And college officials are thrilled that the largest gift in Whittier's history is designated for the library.

"This grant marks a milestone for Whittier College, not only because of its size, but also because of what it means to the college community," said President Ash. "The library represents the intellectual heart of any academic institution, and to receive such generous support for this project is exciting and gratifying."

The $5-million foundation grant, combined with additional gifts designated for the library, will transform Whittier's library into one of its greatest assets. The project is currently estimated at $12 million, and other foundations and potential supporters are already being approached. A new design will be selected once the funding is in place.

For O'Brien, who remembers what Wardman Library meant to Whittier in 1964 and knows as well as anyone what a remodeled library will mean to Whittier today, the priorities are clear.

"A functional design. Space for future growth. A building that's pleasant and conducive to study," he said. "And no less important are seismic strengthening, a building that relates well to the rest of the campus, and handicapped access."

Wardman Library in 1964, O'Brien remembers, "exceeded all our hopes." Hopes are just as high for the remodeled library—the next challenge is to exceed them as well.

If you are interested in supporting the library project, please call the Office of Advancement at (562) 907-4213.

Wardman Library today looks much as it did in 1964. Plans call for the remodeled and expanded library to be more architecturally similar to the older buildings on campus.

Whittier's library through the years

1894 The first college "library" is a single bookcase in Founders Hall. Its holdings consist of about two dozen reference books.

Anna Tomlinson '05

1899 The library's collection, which has grown to more than 1,000 volumes, gets a room of its own—a former art classroom in Founders Hall.

1905 Anna Tomlinson earns her degree and begins a 25-year career as college librarian. Her first task is indexing the library's 2,000 volumes, which she accomplishes with four trays of handwritten file cards.

1928 With the opening of Platner Residence Hall for women, the former Girls' Cottage is remodeled to become Redwood Library.

1936 The library moves to the upper floors of the new Mendenhall Administration Building.

1956 Ghosts in Mendenhall Library? A woman runs into the reading room and cries, "There is an orange astral body following me. I am going to leave him here." She disappears, and books begin falling one by one from the shelves. The mystery is never explained.

1964 The Bonnie Bell Wardman Library opens as Whittier College's first permanent library building.

1993 The Western Association of Schools and Colleges' re-accreditation committee singles out Wardman Library as one of the college's greatest liabilities. It ranks behind the libraries of peer institutions in holdings, infrastructure, staffing, computing services and electronic resources.

1997 A Los Angeles foundation awards a $5 million grant, the largest gift in Whittier College history, for renovation and remodeling of the library.

Additional gifts for the library come from the Caroline P. and Charles W. Ireland Foundation, the Weingart Foundation, and Robert J. '40 and Olive (Chandler) Clift '41.

THE FIRST DAY

BY SCOTT HAYS

WHITTIER LAW SCHOOL OPENS ITS NEW CAMPUS, INSPIRING ONE STUDENT'S AMBITION AND COMMITMENT TO HARD WORK.

At 9:30 or 9:45 a.m., somewhere along in there, on Saturday, Aug. 23, 1997, Bryan McNally felt his life fall into place.

While most 22-year-olds slept, the 1997 Whittier College graduate spent one of the last mornings of summer sitting in a folding chair under the harsh glare of a rising sun, his hands folded in his lap over an orientation program, listening to President Ash celebrate the opening of the new Whittier Law School in Costa Mesa.

For a moment, sitting there with roughly 250 other law students in a grassy quad, McNally thought about his future. He wiped sweat from his brow, straightened the name tag pinned to his lightly starched, blue-checked collared shirt, and took a deep breath. Everything seemed so new—new buildings, new faces, new homework and grades and spending the next three years working toward a Juris Doctor degree.

He didn't know what to expect from Orange

County's newest and only nationally accredited law school, only that he wanted to enter politics one day. Maybe run for president.

And then, just when he thought he couldn't take the heat anymore, Bryan McNally heard John A. FitzRandolph, dean of Whittier Law School, tell the entire student body how they'd be on the "cutting edge" of every social issue in the 21st Century.

That's when it finally hit McNally that, hey, he's a law school student on the road to a promising career.

"Life doesn't get any better than this," he told himself.

He spent the rest of the day with classmates—some his age, some older and in the middle of their careers—going through registration and orientation, wading through paperwork for photo IDs, parking, class schedules. He even glanced at the school's rules and regulations, and the Code of Student Conduct Manual.

And he toured the $21-million, high-tech campus at Harbor Boulevard and Sunflower Avenue

The new 15-acre campus is (designed by the Irvine-based architectural firm Archetype International). Finally, McNally didn't feel like a visitor anymore, but like one of the family.

He compared the new campus to the old, cottage-like law school at Hancock Park in Los Angeles, a quaint facility that had reached full capacity.

The new 15-acre campus is three times the size of the Hancock Park site, with plenty of room for growth. Space alone has increased from 55,000 square feet at the old site to 130,000 square feet in Costa Mesa. There are four rusty-orange, single-story buildings with 14 computer-networked lecture halls and two Moot Courts—all with double-walls and special paneling, rendering them impervious to outside distractions. The hallways are painted in what school officials call "warm, harvest colors," and they're lined with 750 lockers for students with too many books to lug around.

And the 45,000 square feet of library space with study carrels, computer work stations, conference rooms, and soft ceiling lights, all make the experience of entering law school "a bit intimidating, but no less exciting," said McNally.

One of the last mornings of summer was spent sitting under the harsh glare of a rising sun listening to the welcoming speeches of Dean FitzRandolph and President Ash.

The library offers both traditional and on-line legal resources, including LEXIS/NEXIS, WESTLAW/DIALOG, Computer Assisted Legal Instruction, On-line Public Access Catalog, and an extensive CD-ROM collection for interactive instructional programs. It also promises to serve as a resource hub for the more than 10,000 practicing attorneys in Orange, Riverside, and San Bernardino counties.

"It's absolutely fascinating to walk into the library," McNally enthused. "It's going to be an extremely useful place to study, which is mostly what I'll be doing here. I'd be naive to think it would be any other way."

There are plans for a legal clinic that would allow students, under the supervision of faculty, to offer free legal advice to the public.

The school itself was founded 1965 as the Beverly College of Law in Los Angeles. In 1975, Whittier College joined forces with the law school to establish Whittier College School of Law.

Later, after the Hancock Park facility had developed every square foot of building space,

McNally checked in and learned about campus organizations before touring the facilities that make the experience of entering law school "a bit intimidating but no less exciting."

leaders from the law school, along with the Whittier College Board of Trustees and the college administration, began an exhaustive search for a new facility.

A satellite campus was set up in an Irvine office building last year. The first-year class grew from 230 students to 240 students this year.

According to President Ash, the school intends to play a high-profile role in the county's legal community. For one thing, there are plans for a legal clinic that would allow students, under the supervision of faculty, to offer free legal advice to the public. And opportunities for clerking and internships have increased as well, especially in Orange County, the fifth largest county in the country.

"Whittier Law School now has one of the finest campuses in the nation," said Ash. "And it's a credit to the students who choose it as an institution."

Two days after the ceremony, McNally had his first class, Legal Process with Dean FitzRandolph. Three hours later, he finally understood the significance of going to a nationally accredited law school. It means listening to professors with knowledge he personally has yet to acquire. It means sitting in classrooms with students who have similar ambitions. And it means, eventually, taking the bar exam in any state he wants.

McNally will graduate in the year 2000. "Most of my friends are taking a year off before moving on to graduate school," he said. "Not me, I don't want to waste the time. I've always been told, 'Shoot as high as you can and don't stop until you get there.' I know it's going to take dedication and hard work just to make it through the first semester. I'm just proud to be a part of the first class at this extraordinary campus." ■

After his first class, McNally realized one significance of attending a nationally accredited law school: studying with students who have similar ambitions.

“At Whittier I learned how to learn. I know that the Whittier experience won't be available for the next generation of students without the support of alumni. I'm proud that my gift to the Annual Fund helps support the faculty that prepared me so well for Yale Law School and, more importantly, for life.”

“I’ve always been amazed at how the faculty go out of their way to help students. I don’t think you’ll find that at many places. Whittier is unique. I don’t quite know how to express it, but there is a different feeling at Whittier.”

Good Seats are Still Available!

I've always hoped that what I do for Whittier College makes a real difference to students and faculty members. I like to see the results of my gifts, which is why the Lautrup-Ball Cinema renovation project appealed to me.

One of the things that has really pleased me is the enthusiasm of faculty members about this renovation. I've talked with several professors who already have big plans for using the new equipment in their classes. I find that very gratifying.

The Fund-A-Chair program is a good way for alumni and friends of the college to see their gifts helping students as well. Many people have already contributed, and I hope there are others who want to help improve the educational environment at Whittier through this program.
