Getting An Education

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

President Eugene S. Mills

Education is not merely something we teach at Whittier College, it is something we practice.

Our graduates practice it, too. A recent study which segmented our alumni body by occupation revealed that fully 30 percent of Whittier graduates now work in education as teachers and administrators.

It is no surprise that the college community believes strongly in the value of education, in its power and beauty, or that we are committed to excellence in education on all levels, for all populations, on campus and off.

This issue of The Rock has education as its theme. Its two feature articles focus on four alumni who have achieved prominence in the field of education, and on the work of the Broadoaks Early Childhood Development Center.

Of the 58 county superintendents of schools in California, four are graduates of this college. The new editor of The Rock, Sandra Sarr (Daphne Lorne recently retired after 12 years of dedicated service to the college), talked with these four educational leaders, Kenneth Baker of Inyo County, James Cowan of Ventura County, Stuart Gothold of Los Angeles County, and Robert Peterson of Orange County, about current issues in education in the state. Her account of these revealing conversations leads off this issue.

The Broadoaks Early Childhood Development Center serves the college and the surrounding community in several ways. Broadoaks Director Dr. Judith Wagner writes about the work of the program in preparing students for teaching and other careers involving children and their families, and reviews the community activities of Broadoaks, as well.

GETTING AN EDUCATION

Views from the top

By Sandra Sarr

Excellence in education has been redefined. The passage in 1983 of Senate Bill 813 resulted in major school finance and reform legislation, and an important 1985 report titled "Who Will Teach Our Children?" by the California Commission of the Teaching Profession set forth several recommendations since adopted to improve California's schools.

The commission pointed out in its report (known as the Commons Report, named for commission chair Dorman L. Commons) that our future as a state, a nation, and a society depends on what we do to meet the challenge of providing a quality education to all of our children.

Overseeing the quality of public instruction, kindergarten through twelfth grades, in four of California's 58 counties are four Whittier College graduates who fill the role of county superintendent of schools: Mr. Kenneth A. Baker '61 in Inyo County, Dr. James F. Cowan '53 in Ventura County, Dr. Stuart E. Gothold '56 in Los Angeles County, and Dr. Robert D. Peterson '47 in Orange County. Combined, these men supervise the education of nearly 50 percent of the state's public school students.

We met with them recently to discuss key issues in education — the new graduation requirements, bilingual education, funding, the need for innovative programming, and shifting demographics — and their role in influencing them. Although the superintendents' views are offered from a California perspective, many of the issues they raised apply nationwide.

County superintendents' offices generally function as service agencies for school districts within a county. As educational leaders, the superintendents influence legislation by testifying on issues such as those mentioned above before the state legislature, the grand jury, county boards of supervisors, and other public groups.

Although Baker, Cowan, Gothold and Peterson share the same job title, each is faced with a unique set of circumstances. While Stuart Gothold contends with the challenges of urban sprawl in Los Angeles County, Ken Baker grapples with the forces of nature in Inyo County. Los Angeles County may be the biggest with 1.3 million students, (with a student population the size of the entire population of Columbus, Ohio, it's four times larger than the next largest county), but Inyo County, with only 3,100 students, covers the second largest geographical territory of any county and includes the highest and lowest altitudes in the state. Each county presents its own challenges, as reflected in the thoughtful remarks of the four superintendents.

What follows are their views, some concurring, some opposing. All agree, however that the biggest challenge in this state-funded school system is to convince the legislature and the governor that education is a top priority.

L.A. High School for the Arts students rehearse.

BILINGUAL EDUCATION

In 1970, minority students constituted 27 percent of California's student population. By the year 2000, 52 percent will be ethnic minorities. Students with limited proficiency in English now constitute more than 12 percent of all public school enrollments — approximately 550,000 students, more students than 25 other states have enrolled in their entire school system.

Yet, Gov. George Deukmejian this year vetoed legislation for a bilingual education requirement in California. What will this mean for the limited English-speaking children of the state? Responsibility for bilingual education policy has been placed at the local school district level, a reasonable step, in the opinion of all four superintendents. They note that even though the bilingual education guidelines no longer remain in effect, most school districts are continuing their programs.

Peterson: "School districts are juggernauts. Once they get started on something, it takes a lot of effort to change it. They are like big oil tankers the length of three football fields. They just don't turn around 'on a dime,' not even on ten dollars."

"The responsibility and accountability will be at the local level where the needs are best known," Dr. Gothold says. "What we need to guard against is not accepting that accountability."

"It has never been acceptable to me," Gothold continues, "to allow the legislature to say how best to teach a kid. I don't think that's their job. Their job is to say what a kid is supposed to learn, then it's our job as professional educators to figure out how best to teach them. When you approach it that way, there's no controversy over bilingual education. Everyone agrees that we need to teach kids how to speak and function in English while retaining their native language, because it's an advantage to speak two languages. Respect for cultural differences — all this is agreed upon. It's only when we get into legislating how to do it that we have conflict."

Peterson asserts that the state's bilingual education requirement was an onerous burden imposed on selected teachers.

"They were forced to pass foreign language courses without any effort to get their cooperation. It was an edict; you do it or you're not likely to continue. The legislature that children in the early grades are most able to learn another language even when no accommodation is made. "In the later grades it's not so easy; extra effort must be applied. That's one of the mistakes the legislature has made. Enough money should have been applied to do the job correctly in the secondary schools while letting the elementary level take care of itself.

"If we teach the foreign students to speak English, but don't give them an affection for open society, we'll have students question, according to Dr. Cowan, superintendent of schools in Ventura County where the Hispanic student population is 27 percent. "The problem becomes this: in a mobile society, students could be exposed to a wide variety of teaching methods depending upon which school they attend.

"The issue is not whether you support bilingual programs. It is the nature of the programs because they vary from A to Z," Cowan says. "A reasonable approach would be to start by assessing youngsters in their own language. Then they could be worked with in their native language while being introduced to English."

L.A. High School for the Arts students: An exercise in excellence.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION REQUIREMENTS

In 1983, Senate Bill 813 introduced by California Sen. Gary Hart increased the requirements to graduate from California high schools. The toughened standards now include three years of English, two years of math, two years of science (physical and biological), three years of social science and one year of fine arts or foreign language. Supporters say the law has restored schools to the appropriate level of rigor, causing student achievement test scores to improve. Critics claim the law is elitist, pushing less-privileged students out of school.

"Although graduation requirements have increased, that doesn't necessarily mean the quality of education has gone up," Baker says. "Quality needs to be emphasized just as much as quantity. Curriculum requirements have been stretched beyond their limits, spreading teachers and students too thin. But we now see the benefit in sticking to what we know works (basic subjects). A high school diploma should mean something."

made it so rigid. It was an effort to impose perfectionism, and when you try to do so when working with the mass, it can become a strangling straightjacket," Peterson says.

Orange County schools continue to deliver bilingual education "in the manner in which the state had prescribed — as a slow, gentle transition over a period of time." Approximately 24 percent of Orange County's student population is Hispanic, 10.6 percent is Asian/Pacific Islander.

Peterson believes, however, who don't support democracy," Peterson says.

Inyo County schools, led by County Superintendent Ken Baker, are comprised of 8 percent Hispanic students and 8 percent Native American Indian. Most of these students speak English. Those with limited English skills are immersed in English-speaking classrooms where they learn language skills while being taught the basic subjects.

Bilingual education is here to stay — whether it will be handled in a uniform manner throughout the state is a different

James Cowan '53

Peterson concurs. "Setting high coursework standards is just a window dressing effort. The real need is for the teaching quality to improve with the toughened graduation requirements," he says.

Gothold reflects on the need for reform. "We went through a period in the '60s as a society when people felt they needed more choices, they needed more control over their destiny. That translated in the schools to elective courses. Even in the academic areas such as English, you could select a class in propaganda or folklore, and by the time you finished with high school, you may not have had a core curriculum course in English. For the excitement of selecting your own academic program you lost a solid base of knowledge. We just had to come back from where we were in the '60s and try to keep the enthusiasm and interest but recapture some of the basics," Gothold says.

Cowan says that many of the school districts in Ventura County had already adopted stiffened graduation requirements before the Hart Bill was passed. "While I believe it is desirable, I think we must address the question of balance between academics and other knowledge people will need in the world of the future," Cowan says.

Cowan: "We don't want to reach a point at which we have highly trained academicians who walk out into the world and can't enjoy it — who can't participate because they don't have the ability to relate to others . . . Striking that balance is the crucial issue."

"To learn how to learn is probably as crucial as the ability to improve your math scores.

"Employers indicate that very few people are dismissed because they lack the knowledge to do the job. They're dismissed because they don't get along with people. Other aspects of the curriculum besides academics might be crucial to helping people attain the interpersonal skills they need to get along in the world," Cowan says.

MOST SEVERELY UNDERFUNDED AREAS

In post-Proposition 13 California, where competition for limited resources is fierce, the differences in funding needs for urban and rural districts have intensified.

Asked to pinpoint the most severely underfunded areas in K-12, Jim Cowan pauses and answers slowly, "Education is totally underfunded. If I had to pick one area, I'd say class size. Ours rank the largest in the nation. The governor says he wants education to be number one, but we still lag well below the national average in money we're putting into the programs."

Funding problems are largely due to the volatile nature of committees, which includes the legislature, according to Peterson. "Members of the legislature tend to think they can improve education by edict. You don't improve education over the long run in that fashion. What we need is stability in funding. We need to know that for the next three years we'll receive X amount per student or per classroom or per school, and that the funding will be dependable. As it is now, each year is a separate game. We have to predict budgets for staff, supplies and maintenance based on the fortune tellers. Our buildings are deplorable. That's where the cutbacks have been monumental statewide.

"We rank 35th lowest in the nation in funding per ADA (Average Daily Attendance, a state funding formula based on student population). It's embarrassing to consider that my home state, Mississippi, spends more per capita on education than does California," Peterson says.

Baker: "The ADA-based funding system creates inequities in teacher salaries, but the large districts don't complain because they benefit from this funding formula."

"Each of our schools has only 100-500 students, but teachers in small schools have to wear many hats; they must handle a wide variety of responsibilities," he says. Baker has proposed that the legislature base funding on a class equivalency standard, with the ideal class size at 25 students. He seeks a revenue guarantee factor to stabilize funding from year to year.

Academic Decathlon motivates students toward excellence.

and Peterson recognize the ongoing need to offer innovative programming to help combat the student drop-out and teacher burn-out rates.

To motivate students at all levels of achievement, Peterson started the United States Academic Decathlon in 1968 as a local academic competition between 22 Orange County schools. It became a national event in 1982. This year, more than 4,000 schools in the United States and Canada will participate in the event.

"I knew it was possible to have statewide competitions on various subjects. I took part in them as a high school student and the experience motivated me very powerfully," Peterson says. "The Academic Decathlon is not Gothold: "The more trouble you get into, the more money we spend on your education. We have a wonderful education in the juvenile court schools. You have to commit murder to get in. Then we spend twice as much on you as we do on a regular high school student."

The motivation is to be special in some way, to receive more than what's offered in general education.

"Somehow we have found the resources and the compassion to deal with these kinds of kids. On the other hand, we spend only an additional $200 per year on gifted children. Kids with the most potential we believe as a society that they will make it without our help. Look at how much more money we spend on prisons than on daycare centers. I believe general education is at greatest risk today," Gothold says.

INNOVATIVE PROGRAMS

Despite underfunding problems, Baker, Cowan, Gothold

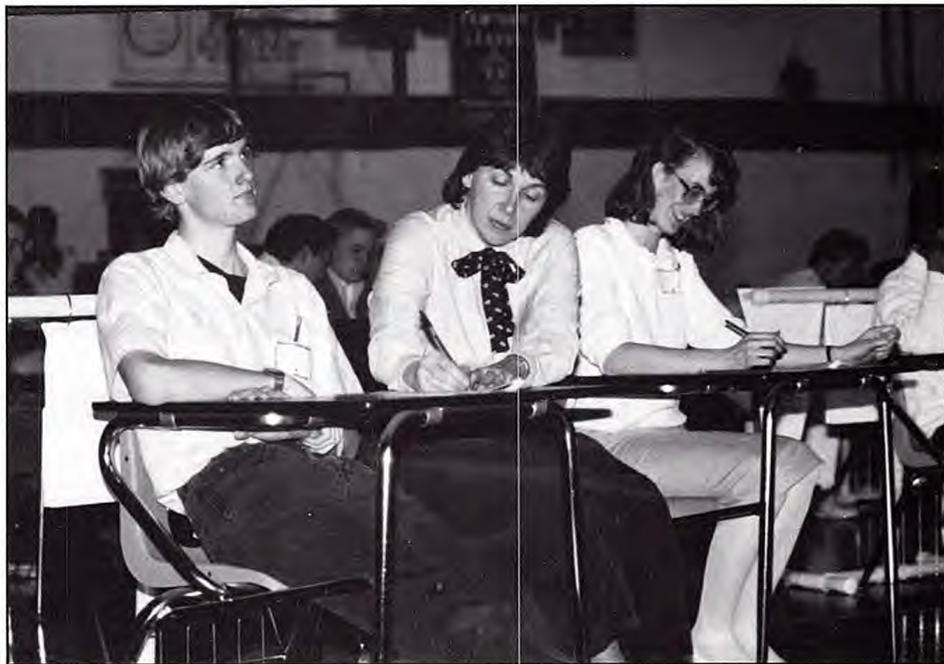

Academic Decathlon participants get cheered on by teammates, family and friends.

just for the academically talented, as are so many other programs that don't motivate the B,C,D and F students and the potential dropouts. Yet, they're the ones who most need, in our open society, to be stimulated," Peterson says.

One of Gothold's most visible innovations is the Los Angeles County High School for the Arts, similar to the school depicted in the movie and television series "Fame." Located on the campus of California State University, Los Angeles, students must audition to be admitted and must have at least a C grade point average. Now entering its third year, the school is one of fewer than 20 full-time arts schools in the nation.

Its 425 students receive eight hours of instruction per day. In addition to the regular five hours of academic classes, students attend three hours of classes within their specialty which could be theater, dance, drama, music (instrumental or vocal), or visual arts. Seniors last year outscored all other districts in the county on their achievement tests. Of last year's 65 graduates, 58 applied to college (the other seven had jobs) and all 58 were accepted.

"We intend to prepare our kids to be competitive with anybody. New York's 'Fame' school (the real one) was literally designed as a farm team for Broadway. We think we've improved on their concept. Our first obligation is to see that our graduates can be admitted to the college of their choice," Gothold says.

Judges score Academic Decathlon participants.

In Cowan's Ventura County, staff development is a top priority. Each year Cowan's office sponsors a four-day workshop for the teachers in the county featuring a series of noted speakers from the educational field. KNBC-TV anchorwoman, Kelly Lange, a speaker this year, has agreed to participate in an ongoing project designed to improve the writing skills of Ventura County students. The students' assignment is to watch the first seven minutes of Channel 4's evening news and write a summary of what they see and hear. Summaries will be selected and read on the air by Lange from time to time.

Inyo County, which sprawls across Death Valley to Mt. Whitney, operates several mobile projects including a jobmobile which provides assessment and career counseling countywide for high school students and adults. Because of extreme weather conditions and a two-hour bus ride to and from school, Inyo County's Death Valley School District is the only district in the state authorized to operate on a four-day school week. The 115 students who live in Death Valley are children of engineers, miners and forest service personnel.

OUTLOOK

Baker, Cowan, Gothold, and Peterson agree that California's Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig has accomplished much for education by providing direction and focus. "We went through a period of terrible public response to the schools," Gothold says. "Bill's election signaled a change in attitude. The public began to say, 'We can no longer criticize the schools, we've got to get busy and help improve them.'" □

THE BROADOAKS SCHOOL: Its Proud Heritage and Bright Future in Early Education

By Dr. Judith Wagner

7 a.m. Most of the campus sleeps. But there, at its northeast corner, the day's activities have already begun. Teachers prepare classrooms and play yards for the children who will soon arrive. Some will still be asleep as their parents carry them into the school. Others will be filled with the energy only a small child can know at dawn's early light.

(A four year old once told me, "I go to school at zero dark thirty so my dad can get to his work on time. Zero dark thirty is too soon in the sleeping.")

The Broadoaks School of Whittier College is among the oldest laboratory schools in the United States. (Demonstration programs on college campuses are often called "laboratory schools" in reference to their role as curriculum models and learning laboratories for college students. Like Broadoaks, many "lab schools" use established, rather than experimental, methods of working with children.)

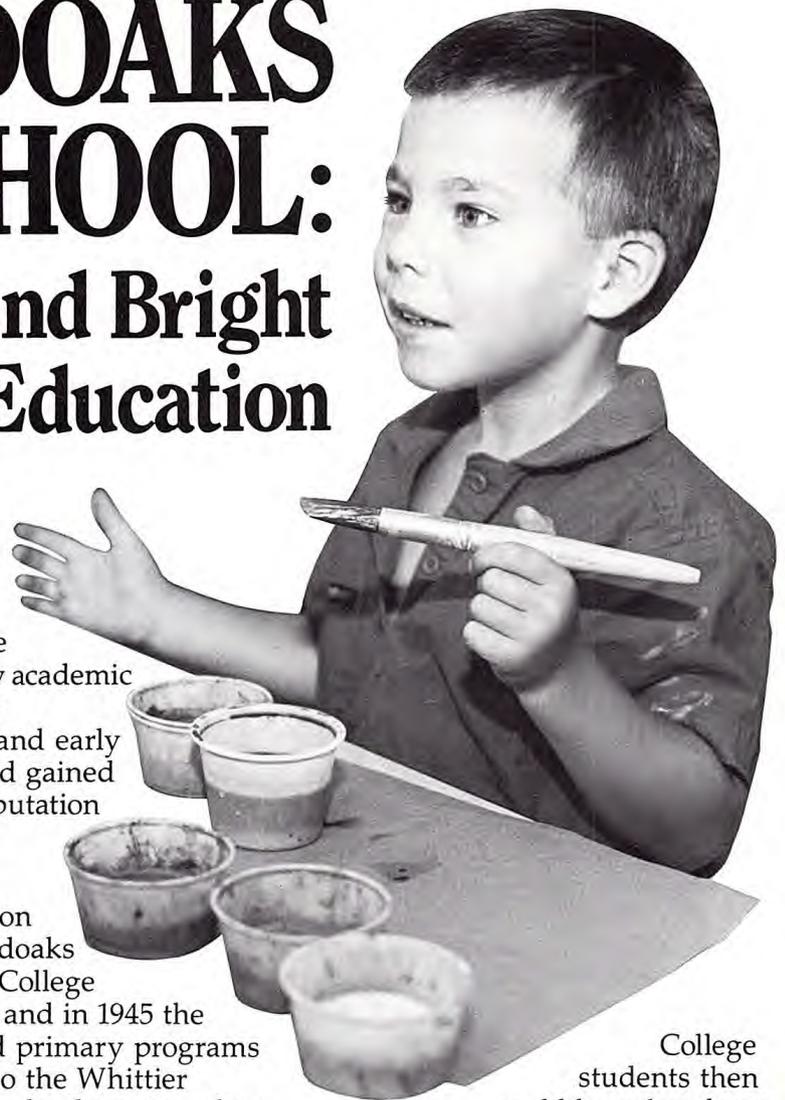

Originally located in Pasadena, the school was founded in 1906 by Ada Mae Brooks and Imelda E. Brooks as a residential home for infants and small children.

By the early 1920s Broadoaks, a pioneer in the relatively new academic fields of child development and early education, had gained a national reputation in teacher preparation.

The affiliation between Broadoaks and Whittier College began in 1931 and in 1945 the preschool and primary programs were moved to the Whittier campus. The school continued to function as a learning laboratory where college students observed children and practiced the methods they learned in their education classes. But it was not until the early 1980s that the Broadoaks Steering Committee developed a plan to return the lab school to a position of national prominence.

The committee expanded the morning-only preschool to full daycare for children between 2½ and 6 years of age. It brought Broadoaks into step with the times, since one of the hottest issues in early education was then, as it is now, the rapidly growing need for high quality, but affordable child care. The daycare services increased socioeconomic and ethnic diversity among the children.

College students then could have hands-on experience with a representative group of children.

The Steering Committee also adopted the High/Scope Cognitively Oriented Curriculum, a long-studied approach that incorporates principles similar to those espoused by the Broadoaks pioneers. High/Scope reflects a fundamental belief in the interaction between all areas of development — intellectual, social-emotional, linguistic, and physical. The cornerstone of the curriculum is the notion that children learn best through their own action within a safe and stimulating environment.

Today Broadoaks is open from 7:15 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, providing full-and part-day preschool and kindergarten programs. (The new Marian K. Bewley Demonstration Classroom, which houses the kindergarten, was built in 1986 with funds raised by the Parent Organization and donations from alumni.)

Each room is organized into several distinct, color-coded areas, including art, dramatic play, books and games, blocks, and science. The preschool rooms also include a "peaceful place," which accommodates only one or two children at a time.

In September and October children usually visit the peaceful place to cuddle up with a soft toy, "call" their parents on the telephone, look at family photographs and otherwise console themselves about their separation from mom and dad. By springtime, the peaceful place often becomes a haven for youngsters exploring what it is to be friends.

"Only two at a time here," they'll tell encroachers. "Me and Bobby is already in here 'cause we're bestest friends today."

Shelves in each area are labeled so children can easily see where materials belong. Beneath the basket of snap cubes, for example, is a photograph of snap cubes. Under the basket for red crayons is a picture of a red crayon with the printed letters "r-e-d." In the dramatic play area, pans hang on wall hooks. The largest pan is on the left and the smallest pan is on the right. As children put the pans away, they learn important concepts about large and small and practice the left-to-right orientation necessary for reading.

The most unique feature of the High/Scope program is its plan-do-review sequence. Children first plan what they will do for a one-hour block of time. Two-year-olds usually plan simply, by pointing to an area where they will work or by bringing the teacher something they want to use.

The planning process becomes more sophisticated as the children grow older. Four-year-olds plan by tracing around materials they will use and then dictating their plans to the teacher, who writes down the child's words verbatim. For example, Mark told his teacher, "I'm going to the block area today. Here is a picture of the red brick block. I am going to make a house and play with Jennifer and build two roads." The written plan goes into the child's cubby and provides parents with daily information about the child's activities.

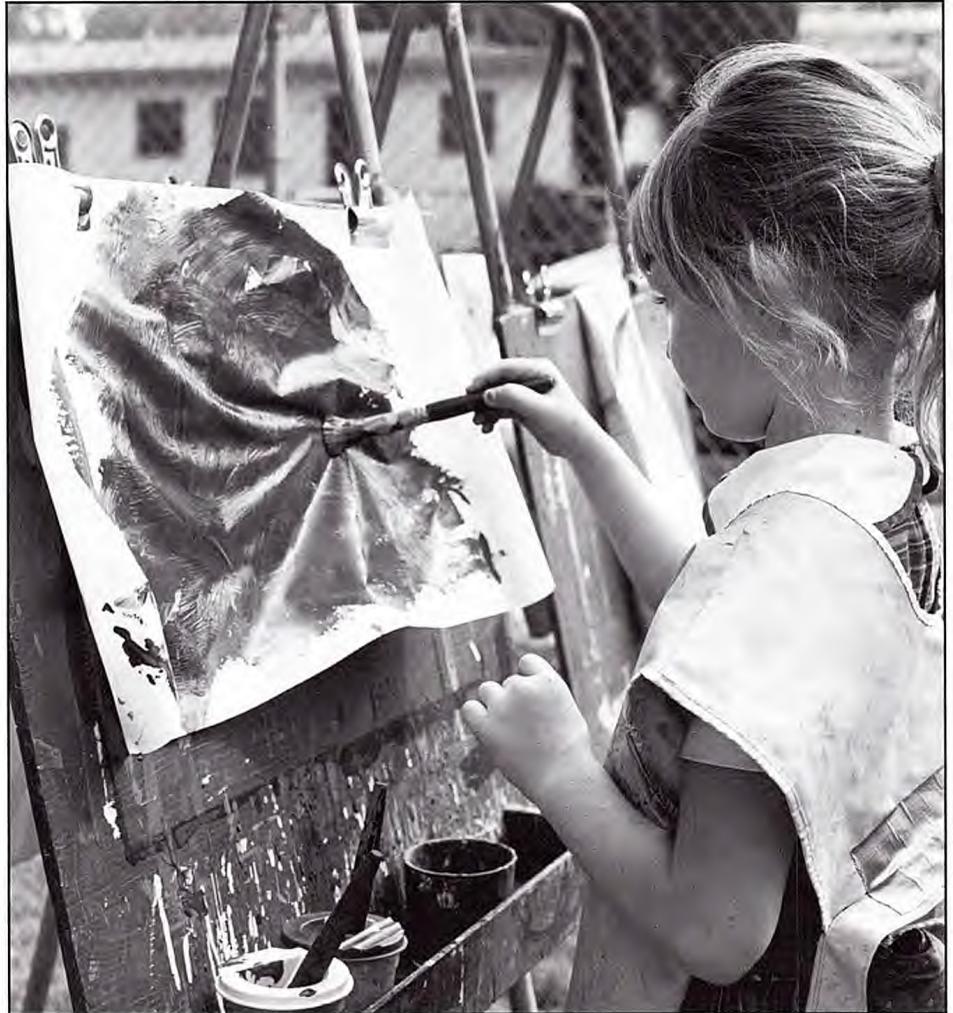

During work time, which follows planning time, children work alone or in small groups to complete the plans they have made. Mark's house may become a hospital and Jennifer may become the doctor who cares for an ailing doll. Tables in the art area will be covered with projects, ranging from a robot constructed from cardboard boxes to a playdough city. In the science area, children watch the fish through magnifying glasses and chart the progress of seedlings in clay pots. In the books and games area, children play simple card games and snuggle into comfortable beanbag chairs while practicum students read stories aloud.

After worktime comes recall time, the "review" part of the plan-do-review sequence. Children return to their small groups and share something significant about what they have done. Michael may bring his cardboard robot and ask his friends to help him figure out how to make it stand up. Sam may show his favorite picture from a dinosaur book. And Jennifer may tell how she felt when Mark told her she could not be the doctor in his hospital anymore. Each child, in his or her own way, is practicing new skills for speaking and listening, following directions and waiting a turn.

Throughout the day, the teacher's primary role is to capitalize on naturally occurring opportunities to help children learn and grow. She offers encouragement, asks questions, and points out problems. She refers children to one another for assistance. "Oh, Billy wants to write down the word 'cat.' I wonder which friend at this table might be able to help Billy."

"I can! I can!" says Catherine. "It's the same letters as my name!"

Teachers encourage compliance with rules by stating what they want rather than what they do not want. When Nancy charges across the classroom to get a crayon, the teacher says,

"Walking feet in the classroom please," rather than "Stop running." Teachers communicate their confidence that the child will want to conform to reasonable rules.

The approach usually works, but when it doesn't the Broadoaks instructional team has a back-up system, which is explained to practicum students, work study students, and student teachers. Sometimes the proximity of an adult leads to an amicable resolution between two squabbling children, but often both children begin talking to the teacher at once. "I had this first. She's taking it," one wails. "I need it for my plan," the other contests.

In her calmest voice the teacher says, "It sounds like both of my friends want the same toy truck. I wonder how you can work this out." She has set the stage for the children to solve the problem for themselves.

The system works most of the time. However, when death, destruction, or dismemberment seems more likely than a peaceful solution, the teacher may ask other children to offer suggestions or she may simply provide a solution herself. She may say, "I think it is time for both of you to find another area to work in today. Now, who's got an idea for a new plan?"

Throughout the day, Broadoaks children have opportunities to make choices. Even during small group, which is the only time when the teacher chooses materials to be used by everyone in her group, children are invited to explore the teacher-selected materials in their own ways. For example, when Mercedes Garcia, the assistant director and lead teacher, recently gave all children a ball of playdough and three plastic bears, she said, "Show me what you can do with the materials on your tray." The results were as varied as were the children's imaginations. Later, Mrs. Garcia explained her technique to a student taking an early childhood practicum: "Just think how I would have limited the children if I had told them what to make. We always try to ask questions in ways that will encourage them to think for themselves, not simply reflect the thinking of the teacher."

Broadoaks population includes a relatively high percentage of children with special needs. The school mainstreams children from the Oralingua School for the Deaf and accepts referrals from Child Protective Services and local mental health agencies.

Instructional teams meet daily to discuss the progress of individual children, assess the day's program, plan for the next day and meet with college students. Faculty members from various disciplines often join the team meetings. For example, Dr. Amy Mass from the Social Work Department and Anne Farmer, English Department chair, work in the preschool program regularly and share their points of view at team meetings.

The goals of the Broadoaks School are to serve as a learning laboratory for college students and others whose career plans involve children and their families, to demonstrate the best of what is known about meeting the needs of young children in a school setting, and to work within the larger community on behalf of young children and their families.

As a demonstration school, we work in a fishbowl. We never know when someone is observing through the one-way glass which surrounds the main classroom. We don't know when the observer arrives, when he or she leaves, or what the experience has told him or her about interacting with young children. Therefore, the instructional team is constantly concerned about making every program hour a high quality experience for each child in the classroom. Our goal is to ensure that every college student or teacher from another school sees us putting our philosophy into action.

This commitment to quality — this vision of child care as it ought to be — places many demands on the teachers who work in the fishbowl. We must concentrate on every detail. We must coordinate our work in the classrooms with several courses in education and child development. We must address the needs and interests of the college students who work with us.

That Broadoaks is a hub of academic activity on the campus is clearly demonstrated by facts and figures from the 1986-87 Year End Report. For example, nearly 200 different Whittier College students made more than 2,650 visits to the lab school during the year. Contact hours between college students and Broadoaks staff were equivalent to two full-time faculty teaching 20 units per year with an average class size of 20 students. Instructors of 16 different courses made assignments involving work at Broadoaks. And six students completed advanced research projects at Broadoaks.

With so much going on, the Broadoaks Advisory Council, which includes college faculty, parents, Broadoaks staff, community representatives, and college students, assists in establishing priorities each year. The primary goals for the near future are to add grades one through three to the demonstration program, to increase research and other learning opportunities for college students and faculty, to upgrade the outdoor environments, and to continue efforts to enhance Broadoaks' role as a recognized national leader in early education and child development.

Progress toward these goals is evident. The North Campus Development Plan, which will begin in 1988 with the moving of Philadelphia House and the construction of the Performing Arts Center, includes space for additional preschool and primary classrooms. The Parent Organization and the Broadoaks Alumna Association continue their efforts to raise funds to improve outdoor learning environments.

That Broadoaks once again enjoys a reputation for excellence is evidenced by frequent references to the program at professional meetings and by the more than 300 people who visit the lab school each year. While most visitors are from California, some are from such distant places as the East Coast, China, Japan, Germany, and France. In March 1988, the director of preschool teacher preparation in Denmark will attend one of Broadoaks' monthly Teaching Skills Institutes, which provide both theoretical and experiential learning opportunities for experienced teachers and program administrators.

Resisting the urge to rest on a reputation for excellence and a long waiting list, the staff continues to explore ideas for improving program quality. For example, on the first day of the new school year, young Chris balked at his teacher's request to join the morning greeting circle.

"Circles, circles," he muttered. "I've been in daycare since I was a baby. I've been in circle my whole dad-berned, lived-longed life."

And with this story we began the daily team meeting. Another challenge for the fishbowl: how do we make sure school remains an exciting, interesting place even for those children who have been here their whole dad-berned, lived-long lives?

Judith Wagner is director of The Broadoaks School of Whittier College.

Law School

Beyond the Classroom

"Law school is more than just going to classes and long hours of study in the law library," asserts Dean John A. FitzRandolph. Dean FitzRandolph is a strong proponent of student organizations, which he says provide "opportunities and experiences which supplement and enhance the formal education process." He adds, "Students can learn valuable skills, make important contacts with alums and others, and develop lasting friendships through their participation in these organizations," of which many kinds are available at the Whittier College School of Law.

The law school sponsors chapters of two fraternal organizations: Phi Alpha Delta International Law Fraternity and Delta Theta Phi Law Fraternity.

Phi Alpha Delta is a major international law fraternity open to both male and female members of the bench, the bar and students of the law. For the law student, PAD provides an opportunity to bridge the gap between the academic emphasis of law school and the realities of the practicing profession. Student chapters work with alumni chapters to provide such programs as "Lunch with a Lawyer," which matches students and practicing attorneys with similar interests, and "A Day with a Judge."

Theresa M. Brzozowski '89 is Justice of the Whittier chapter of Phi Alpha Delta. Originally from Milltown, N.J., Theresa received her B.A. from Fordham University in the Bronx, N.Y., where she majored in political science. Theresa is interested in real estate law and plans to return to the East Coast to take the New York and New Jersey bar examinations.

Delta Theta Phi is an international professional law fraternity with a strong emphasis on the word "professional." The principle objective of the organization is to "unite fraternally congenial students of the law, and to lead them and their fellow students to high scholarship and legal learning."

The current dean of Delta Theta Phi at Whittier is Stepan Baghdassarian '88. Steve was born in Beirut, Lebanon, and settled in the United States in 1976. He received a B.A. in political science from UCLA in 1984, and subsequently opened an electronic components brokering company. He eventually sold the company to become a full-time student at the law school. Steve hopes to work in the District Attorney's Office after graduation.

Some organizations on campus are formed with a very specific focus, as in the case of the Whittier Law Review. The Law Review is a legal periodical published four times a year by the students of the law school. Students at the top of their class are invited to participate in the writing, editing and publishing of articles of interest to the legal community. The Review also sponsors an annual Health Law Symposium which draws together attorneys, doctors and other health care professionals for a day-long session of presentations and small group discussions on health care issues.

Robin Karr '88 editor-in-chief of the Law Review, graduated from USC with a B.S. in business. After graduation, she became a production assistant for the nationally syndicated radio program "American Top 40." Since enrolling at the law school, Robin has become immersed in campus activities. She has served as vice president of the Student Bar Association and is a member of Moot Court.

Several campus associations are organized around special interest groups, specifically the Asian and Pacific Islanders Law Student Association, the Black American Law Student Association (BALSA) and the Hispanic American Law Student Association.

The Asian and Pacific Islanders Law Student Association is a forum for discussion of customs, cultures, legal problems and opportunities unique to the Asian American and Pacific Islander communities. This student association is closely affiliated with many of the ethnic bar associations in the Los Angeles area, as well as with Asian student organizations at other law schools.

Cary T. Tanaka '88 is director of this group. A native of Hawaii, Cary attended the University of Hawaii where he majored in elementary education. After a year as a sixth grade teacher in Ewa Beach, Hawaii, Cary decided to change professions and go to law school. Cary wants to return to Hawaii to practice law after graduation.

The Black American Law Student Association (BALSA) is a student organization committed to Black students with an interest in the profession of law. The Whittier chapter is primarily concerned with providing support for minority recruitment efforts and assistance in the areas of admissions, financial resources and tutorial services.

According to Vince Winter '88 president of BALSA at Whittier, the group's focus this year will be academic performance and student retention through the use of study groups, tutorial services and lectures. Vince graduated from Indiana State University with a B.S. in public administration and a minor in economics. He is currently self-employed as a legal assistant and attends law school part time.

Jimmie Williams '88 is also actively involved with BALSA. A past chapter president, Jimmie is now the regional director of BALSA for the Southern California area. Jimmie graduated from UC Berkeley with a B.S. in engineering.

The Hispanic American Law Student Association provides an opportunity for students to promote the professional goals of Hispanic American law students. Leticia Moreno '89 coordinator of the program, graduated from Cal State University, Los Angeles with a B.A. in psychology. She is interested in labor law and eventually wants to practice in the Hispanic community. "I want to give something back to my community," she says.

Some campus groups such as the Whittier International Law Society and Moot Court are designed specifically to give members hands-on experience in the fields they wish to pursue.

The International Law Society provides a forum and a focal point for those students interested in expanding their general legal education to include areas of public and private international law. This group plans and sponsors an annual international law symposium, which is open to the public. In the past, the society has hosted symposia on such topics as human rights, international terrorism and the rights of women.

Robert C. Von Bargaen '88 president of the International Law Society, graduated from Long Island University with a degree in comparative languages in 1962. He raised a family and sold pharmaceuticals, but when his two daughters went off to college, he says he "got the bug to go back to school, too." Robert is interested in practicing international law upon graduation.

All students are invited to participate in Moot Court competition. Participants develop skills in the preparation of appellate briefs and practice oral argumentation before a panel of judges. Moot Court teams represent the law school in local and national competitions.

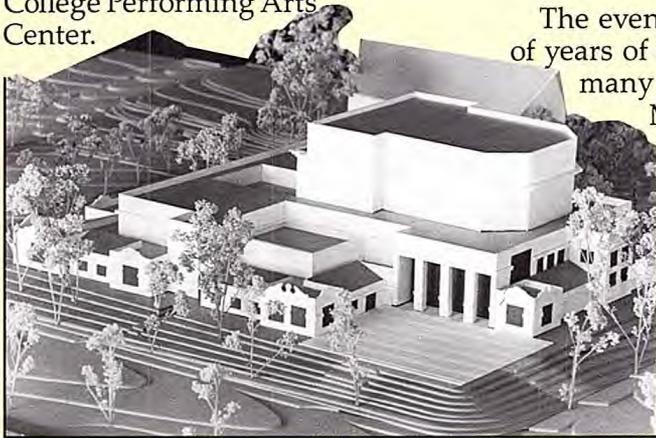

Teresa M. McGowan '88 is chairperson of Moot Court at Whittier. She attended the University of San Diego, where she graduated with a B.A. in English. Although she is looking toward a solo practice involving litigation after graduation, Teresa is also interested in politics. She was awarded Best Oral Advocate honors during the spring 1987 Moot Court Competition.

The Student Bar Association (SBA) is an independent student organization. Its enterprises include arranging social activities for the students, conducting student trial-practice programs, publishing the student newspaper and organizing other student-run projects.

Brian Pasternak '89 is president of the Student Bar Association. A graduate of the University of Florida at Gainesville, Brian double-majored in political science and philosophy. While in college, Brian produced and directed a television show entitled "That's the Law," which aired twice weekly in the Gainesville area. Brian is a recipient of the Congressional Gold Award, given by the U.S. Congress to honor youth for voluntary and personal achievements. □

Getty Trust, Irvine Foundation Back Performing Arts Center, Ground Broken Oct. 22

Trustees, faculty, administration, students and friends of Whittier College joined officials of the city of Whittier, representatives of the architectural firm Albert C. Martin and Associates, members of the community and the press on Thursday, Oct. 22, to break ground for the new Whittier College Performing Arts Center.

The new Whittier College Performing Arts Center will resemble this model.

The long-anticipated ground-breaking came just weeks after the college learned that the J. Paul Getty Trust and the James Irvine Foundation had made donations of $500,000 and $400,000, respectively, in support of the project.

The ceremony, held on the future site of the center, east of Painter Ave. between Philadelphia and Olive streets, was followed by a reception held beneath Bonnie Bell Wardman Library. The reception featured several brief talks by, among others, Performing Arts Center Campaign Chairman Mrs. E.L. Shannon, Jr. and President Eugene S. Mills. Musical and dramatical performances were staged by Whittier students from the Music Department and the Speech and Drama Department.

The event was the culmination of years of work on the part of many in attendance, notably Mrs. Shannon, who has labored long and diligently to raise the funds necessary to bring theatre back on campus and make an auditorium available for largescale musical performances.

Since the fire which destroyed Founder's Hall (and Poet Theatre) in 1968, college dramatic performances have taken place in the Whittier community center auditorium, and musical performances in Memorial Chapel, Arnold Hall and off campus.

Buildings to be Moved

The preparation of the building site, already largely cleared, will continue in coming months. Philadelphia Hall, which houses the Admissions Office, and the Student Services Building will both be moved up Philadelphia

St. where they will be re-erected to form a quadrangle with the Broadoaks Early Childhood Development Center.

Philadelphia Hall will be moved first, Admissions will move to temporary quarters in Stauffer Science Center (in the recently-vacated Science Library), and grading of the site will begin.

By early 1988, the building's shell will begin to rise.

Project Enjoys Broad Support

Both President Mills and Mrs. Shannon commented on the breadth of support the $8 million Performing Arts Center Campaign ($7 million to build the facility and $1 million in endowment to provide for its maintenance) has received. In fiscal year 1986-87 alone, the campaign received corporate or foundation gifts of $25,000 or larger from the Ahmanson Foundation, the Baker Foundation, the Lusk Company, and the Weingart Foundation. The Getty and Irvine gifts, referred to above, came during fiscal year 1987-88.

Private gifts of $25,000 or larger were received from anonymous sources (two $100,000 gifts), from Dr. and Mrs. Fred Harcourt, and Edward and Mollie O. Miller.

The city of Whittier has also supported the project generously. The city has agreed to perform significant upgradings of Philadelphia St. around the corner of Painter Ave. The planned improvements include burying the telephone lines and widening the street. ☐

Trustees Establish Real Estate Committee

The Board of Trustees recently established a new committee, the Real Estate Committee, chaired by Trustee Jim Mitchell. The members of the committee, in addition to Mitchell, are Harriet F. Harris, Kenneth Hodges, George Kelsch, Interim Vice President for College Advancement Jerry Laiblin, Charles Lineberger, and Robert Moore.

The purpose of the committee is to dispose of parcels of real estate that come to the college in bequests and by other means in an orderly manner and at maximum value. The committee also seeks to acquire real estate for investment purposes.

The committee already has begun work. They disposed of several parcels of land that came to the college as part of the Nina Harris estate, sold 22 cemetery plots given to the college as a contribution to the Performing Arts Center Campaign, and liquidated a parcel of land included in the Grigg estate.

Centennial Challenge Program Extended

General Secretary of the Centennial Challenge Campaign William H. (Mo) Marumoto announced recently that a trustee has donated an anonymous $100,000 in additional challenge funds to permit the campaign to be continued as planned through the end of calendar year 1987.

The response to last year's Challenge effort was so strong that the $150,000 Trustee Matching Fund has already been allocated.

Donations to the Centennial Challenge Campaign totalled $342,617 last year. Unrestricted alumni giving totalled $640,434. Unrestricted annual giving from all sources was $1,065,933.

Like last year's Challenge Campaign, this year's will match most new donations of $499 or less one-to-two, and new donations of $500 or more, one-to-one. A minimum donation level (in terms of eligibility for Challenge matching only) of $25 still applies for the classes of 1980 to 1987; all other classes must contribute a minimum of $85 to qualify for the matching program.

System Has Been Revised

One change has been made. In recognition of the importance of continuing donors, the college will now match every unrestricted dollar contributed above and beyond the amount contributed last year one-to-one. For example, if you gave $100 last year and increase that gift to $150 this year, the $50 in increased giving will be matched one-to-one, making the value of your gift $200.

Membership in the John Greenleaf Whittier Society will be open through Dec. 31 to those who contribute $500 (matched one-to-one).

A Letter From President Mills

The close of one year and the beginning of the next is always a time for reflection. In higher education, of course, New Year's Eve comes not in December, but in September, and is celebrated not with champagne but with orange juice in the Campus Inn at a table full of students.

The year just closed merits, perhaps, more reflection than most for several reasons.

It was, for one thing, our Centennial year, as auspicious an anniversary for a college as for a woman or man. In the course of an extensive schedule of

Vanessa Mills, '89

Centennial events—the Centennial Convocation at which we honored 100 fine friends for achievements emblematic of those attained by our thousands of alumni, living and dead; the Centennial Homecoming, capped so satisfactorily by the last-minute, come-from-behind victory over Occidental; the parade; Adopt-a-Grandparent Day; Quaker Heritage Week and many others—I was called upon again and again to look back on the history of this college and relate it to the situation today.

Whittier College remains in one sense what it has always been: a liberal arts college with a talented student body, a caring faculty and a much-adored rock. We still teach and learn beneath a near-ubiquitous sun on the slope of our historic hillside. The Quaker heritage of the school still affects the way we in the faculty and administration make decisions, and is reflected in the tolerance and mutual respect with which our diverse student body interacts.

In many other respects we are changing. Or perhaps I should say growing, because the changes spring out of what has come before.

Some of the changes are more noticeable than others, or soon will be. Elsewhere in this magazine you will read of the groundbreaking for the Whittier College Performing Arts Center. I dare say that when the fence goes up, the buildings begin to be moved and the bulldozers get to work, the center will begin to seem to everyone what it already seems to me: the most exciting thing to happen on this campus in years.

Not too many months after we begin the Performing Arts Center, a second and equally important building program will begin—the construction of a badly-needed new residence hall to accommodate 100 students.

The question of student housing brings to mind another sense in which we are growing: this year's entering class of 336 freshmen and 45 transfer students is the largest such group in more than eight years.

The freshmen are encountering change not only in the guise of a bulldozer, but in the classroom as well. This year we made two related curricular changes designed to improve the thinking and writing skills of our students.

One is the introduction of freshman writing seminars. Taught by professors from many disciplines (there are 18 sections), the courses bring together a small number of freshmen with an experienced professor to read and write intensively about an extended theme: utopias, for example, in the case of Professor of Philosophy Michael Praetorius' section.

The second is the implementation of writing across the curriculum. Writing across the curriculum amounts to a pedagogical theory premised on the notion that a student always should be writing, that writing is as necessary an activity in the sciences as in the humanities and that worthwhile class assignments involving writing can be fashioned for virtually any class. Such writing assignments are now being made throughout the entire curriculum at Whittier College.

The development of our new writing program is supported in part by the Consortium for the Advancement of Private Higher Education.

While student life on campus last year was much influenced by the Centennial celebrations, the first year of our second century undoubtedly will be a time of new beginnings with the usual pattern of sports, student government and society life.

Notable among last year's developments was the founding of an on-campus radio station, KWTR, by the A.S.W.C., actively led in this endeavor by President Tom Keilty ('87), Adam

The three NSF grants support science education at Whittier College.

Chris Marshall '85, Jesse Schwarz and Jui-Lin (Su) Praetorius '84 work on a composition.

Kurtenbach ('88), and the late Jeff Foster.

All the Poet teams strove for excellence valiantly last season, and some achieved distinction. The women's softball team was named SCIAC Champions for 1987 after completing the season with a 11-1 record and an overall record of 26-11.

The lacrosse team again enjoyed an outstanding season. Finishing the season with a 20-3 record, the team was favored to win the Western Collegiate Lacrosse League playoffs, held on campus, but was defeated in the championship game by our archrivals from the University of California at Santa Barbara. The Poet lacrosse team finished the season ranked 16th among Division III teams nationally.

The societies had as active a year as might be expected in the college's Centennial year. They participated enthusiastically as representatives of the college in the joint college/City of Whittier Centennial Parade and held a series of Centennial receptions in conjunction with Homecoming.

The college fund-raising effort, meanwhile, was more successful in 1986-87 than in any previous year in college history! The $5.2

million raised (total giving, all sources) brought the Second Century Fund Campaign nearly to its conclusion. The most ambitious fund-raising effort in our first century will end successfully by year's end.

Alumni support for the annual fund remained strong. The record $342,617 in unrestricted (non-trustee) giving was the largest such amount ever received by Whittier College. The comparable sum as recently as 1982-83, by the way, was $86,000.

Participation in the annual fund continued around the 30 percent level that was rather firmly established by the alumni in response to the Irvine Foundation Challenge.

The general response to our long-term effort to improve the financial base of the college has been positive, and we are grateful.

The following pages constitute a record of those who helped the college with donations during the fiscal year 1986-87 (July 1 to June 30). I know I speak for the whole college community in extending thanks to those whose names appear here. They, and everyone else who one way or another supports Whittier College, make the future possible. ☐

Letters to the Editor

Editor:

I have recently received the Summer 1987 issue of The Rock. I was shocked to see the article entitled "Red Flag," concerning the U. S. Air Force Tactical Fighter Weapons Center and Major General Peter T. Kempf.

What possible relationship does operation Red Flag have to Whittier College? I gather that Major General Kempf and his wife are alumni, though the references to such could have been made more clear. Even if this is the case, why would such a militaristic article be included in a Whittier College publication?

I realize that many Friends have departed from our Christian witness for peaceable living and that many alumni and present students are not Quakers. I do not stand in judgment of those who have chosen (in good conscience) to serve in the armed forces. Nevertheless, your institution was founded upon Quaker principles and continues to receive a significant level of support from members of the Religious Society of Friends. It seems to me that it would behoove any organ representing Whittier College not to (without a disclaimer, at least) publish material which is so diametrically opposed to Friends historic faith and practice. To do so, undermines the ethical integrity of an otherwise fine institution. I, for one, now seriously question whether I shall continue to support Whittier College in any fashion in the future.

Sincerely,
Rick L. Troth

Editor:

Greetings and some first impressions from a newcomer to Japan. It is hard to believe that several months have passed since we left Los Angeles. We are well settled in our apartment which is less than two miles from the Tokyo office. The maximum commuting time is 30 minutes if I walk, 18 minutes on subway or bus, and 10 minutes by taxi. The mass transportation system is great and I don't miss driving a car. Everything we need is within a quarter of a mile from our apartment.

The new job is exciting, just like Ernst & Whinney promised it would be, and responsibilities very diverse. It is truly international with daily contact—telephone, faxes, letters, or visitors from foreign offices, including the U.S.A.

We like Tokyo. It's a fast-moving international city with great foreign restaurants except for Mexican food—can't have everything. Japan's history is fascinating and we'll begin taking trips to the older, culturally oriented cities outside Tokyo when Gail and I return from our daughter's wedding in September.

I have played three rounds of golf in Japan and it has been some of the most enjoyable golf I have ever played. The courses are beautiful and very similar to mountain courses with mature trees lining the fairways. The Japanese use women caddies neatly dressed in uniforms. They repair all ball marks, replace divots, clean clubs after every shot and generally spoil the hell out of you. Yes, it does take all day, but the golf, meals, and hot bath afterward make it all worthwhile.

Oscar Jimenez '61

I begin business travel in November with an around-the-world trip to Paris, London, Dusseldorf, Boston (partners' meeting), Los Angeles, Vancouver and Tokyo. In December, on the way home for Christmas holidays, we'll visit Hong Kong, Singapore and Sydney. Gail and I have never traveled and we are making up for lost time in a hurry.

Best wishes.

Sincerely,
Oscar Jimenez '61

Editor's note: Oscar Jimenez, a partner with Ernst and Whinney, arrived in Japan in August to head up the firm's Tokyo-based International Department. □

FRESHMEN PROFILED

Three hundred ninety-nine new students entered Whittier this fall, 336 of whom are freshmen. This is the largest entering class the campus has seen since 1979, according to Director of Admissions Katy Murphy. She adds that while 49 percent of the freshmen are from California, the remaining 51 percent come from 33 other states and fourteen foreign countries. Approximately 33 percent of the freshmen described themselves as ethnic minorities on one admissions questionnaire—yet another indicator of diversity at Whittier.

Murphy also expressed pride in the abilities and achievements of the new students. Five were student body presidents, six were class presidents, 10 were high school newspaper editors, 13 were high school yearbook editors, and 19 listed themselves as members of SADD—Students Against Drunk Driving.

Many students were achievers on the athletic fields, as well. Nearly 100 of the entering freshmen were team captains in high school sports, and a large percentage of the rest of the class participated in at least one sport in high school.

Glenn and Barbara Taylor help daughter Hillary, a Whittier College freshman, move into Ball Hall.

Jennifer Goble '89, Bethany Goble '89 and Marla Wolsky '89 take a break from their move on Sept. 5 into Ball Hall.

Freshman Jessica Grimes and her father Don unload her belongings after their drive down from San Francisco.

Second-generation poets meet on campus. Left to right: Brian Chestnut, son of Dean '56 and Linda (Coppula '66) Crowley; Sandy Williams-Lopez, daughter of Billie Ware Williams '58; Mike Westmoreland, son of David '62 and Sharon (Lowe '63) Westmoreland; Tamiko Marumoto, daughter of William "Mo" '57 and Jean (Morishige '59) Marumoto; Dave Smith, son of Elden '62 and Barbara (Whaley '64) Smith; Melissa Williams, daughter of Kenneth '64 and Martha (Grams '62) Williams; Jeff Boline, son of Richard Boline '67.

Dezember Succeeds Myers as Chairman of the Board

Rayburn S. Dezember '53 of Bakersfield, Calif., was elected Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Whittier College at a meeting of the board on Monday, Sept. 28, according to college president Eugene S. Mills.

Dezember succeeds R. Chandler Myers of Los Angeles, who has served as Chairman of the Board for six years.

In announcing Dezember's election, President Mills praised the contributions of out-going board chairman Myers, whom he called "a distinguished educational leader with a generous spirit and a laudable commitment to service."

Mills also praised Dezember, citing his strong belief in the importance of liberal arts colleges and his continuing support of his alma mater.

A member of the Board of Trustees since 1970, Dezember graduated from Whittier College in 1953 with a B.A. in sociology. Active as a student while at Whittier, he served as freshman class president, Orthogonian Society president, and student body president in 1952-53. Since graduating, Dezember has been active in the Whittier College Alumni Association, of which he was president in 1970-71.

Rayburn S. Dezember '53

Currently, Dezember is chairman of the board and president of the Central Pacific Corporation and chairman of the board of American National Bank. In addition, he is director of The Bakersfield Californian, the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco and Visa U.S.A.

In addition to his work at Whittier, Dezember's interests in education have led him to service with other groups as well. He is co-chairman of the Beale Memorial Library Foundation and Pacific Region director of the Boys Club of America. He served as a Trustee for Kern County Joint Union High School District from 1972-81.

Dezember is married to the former Joanne Erreca '56. They have four children, two of whom, Rebecca and Cherilee, are also Whittier graduates.

New Faculty, Staff Added

Whittier welcomes several new faculty members to campus this fall.

James Dwyer, who has moved to Whittier from San Diego, will teach philosophy this year while David Hunt is on sabbatical and Mike Praetorius administers an NEH project. Jim has his M.A. and Ph.D. from University of California, Irvine and his B.A. from University of California, Santa Cruz.

Timothy Jenkins will teach physics this year. He has moved with his wife Barbara from Houston, where he spent the last year as a research associate at the University of Houston. Tim received his B.A. from Linfield College and his M.S. and Ph.D. from Clarkson College of Technology. Tim also served in the Peace Corps in the West Indies.

Mary Finan has joined our Business Administration Department. Mary has taught at Whittier from time to time and will be teaching management courses. She also teaches in the Graduate School of Management at University of California, Irvine. Her Ph.D. is from the University of Chicago, her M.A. from Manhattan College and her B.A. from Mount St. Mary's in Los Angeles.

Gregory Farmer is joining Physical Education and Recreation as swim coach and teacher of exercise physiology. He has been working with the Sun Valley Athletic Club in Ketchum, Idaho, and teaching at the College of Southern Idaho. He taught swimming for the University of Arizona and has taught biology and physical science at the high school level. Greg received his M.S. and B.S. from the University of Arizona.

Irene Matz, who has been teaching at local community colleges, will teach speech communications at Whittier this year. She received her M.A. and B.A. from California State University, Fullerton. Irene and her family live in Cypress.

Claudine Thire comes to Whittier from France via Washington, D.C., Venezuela, England, and the Dominican Republic. She holds dual French and Venezuelan citizenship. Claudine, who will be teaching French and Spanish at Whittier, received her Ph.D. from Paris University and her B.A. from Paul Valery University.

Cathy Reback will teach in the Sociology Department while Les Howard is on sabbatical. She received her M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of California at Santa Cruz and has conducted research for a sexuality research group for the past two years. Cathy completed undergraduate work at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Anne Eggebroten will teach in the English Department while Wendy Furman directs the Copenhagen Program this fall, and will continue while she is on sabbatical leave. Anne has taught at City College of San Francisco, California State University, San Bernardino and Golden Gate University. She earned her B.A. at Stanford and her M.A. and Ph.D. at Berkeley. She and her family live in Costa Mesa.

Judith Cook will teach ceramics and printmaking classes and direct the Mendenhall Art

Gallery. Judith's own work has been exhibited in Arizona, Texas and Connecticut. She received her M.F.A. from Arizona State and her B.S. from Southern Connecticut State University. She also attended the Heatherly School of Art in London.

In addition to the many fine new faculty members on campus this fall, there are some new faces in college administration.

Ken Kelly will be the assistant director for residence life as well as the summer conferences coordinator. Other new faces in residence life include Missy Woods and George McKernan, area coordinators in the residence halls this year. Lauralyn Bauer will serve as the career counseling intern in the Career Planning and Placement Office as she works on her M.A. at California State University, Long Beach.

New in the Admissions Office are Ken Woods, Sherry Squire and Tim Masterson. Tim and Sherry are admissions counselors and Ken, who transferred from Student Services, is assistant director of admissions.

Dr. William Stimmler is the new college physician, replacing Dr. Harold West who retired this summer. Dr. Stimmler, a graduate of University of California, Irvine and the University of Southern California School of Medicine, is on staff at Presbyterian Intercommunity Hospital.

There have been several changes in the Advancement Office, as well. Klane Robison has assumed the position of director of planned giving for the college, following 30 years of service as senior minister at First Friends Church. Cheryl Seagren, a former material systems analyst for Hughes Aircraft, is now Whittier's director of annual giving, and Kevin Doody, who worked as a market analyst at The Geneva Companies, is our director of research and major gifts. In addition, Sandra Sarr has been named assistant director of communications and editor of The Rock. Sandra comes to Whittier from Orange Coast College, where she was public information and publications coordinator. ☐

Profs Receive Academic Advising Awards

Whittier College's Academic Advisement Program and members of its staff recently received two awards from the American College Testing Program and the National Academic Advising Association recognizing excellence in that field.

Michael J. McBride, professor of political science, was named ACT/NACADA's Outstanding Advisor from a field of numerous candidates in the nation's western region.

In addition, the college's Freshman Advisement Program received the organization's top honor, the Outstanding Institutional Advising Program Award, according to Gerald S. Adams, associate academic dean for advisement.

A major component of Whittier College's Freshman Advisement Program is its mentoring system.

"Whittier College considers advisement an extension of the teaching process," Dr. Adams says. "In fact, we are one of only a very few colleges in the United States that predicates a faculty member's tenure upon effective advising."

Approximately 30 faculty and administrators are trained as mentors each year. Their relationship with new students begins during orientation week and continues until students select an adviser in their major.

Dr. McBride has served as mentor/adviser at Whittier College for 18 years, in addition to his teaching and administrative responsibilities. He served as director of advisement from 1981-85.

"Mike McBride's areas of greatest strength are in knowing his advisees, being a good listener, providing a caring atmosphere, giving accurate information, respecting students' right to make decisions and encouraging them to be active listeners," Adams says.

"The awards only underscore Whittier College's ongoing commitment to giving each student the personal attention necessary for academic success," Adams says. □

Whittier College Awarded Three National Science Foundation Grants

The National Science Foundation recently awarded Whittier College three matching grants to help fund innovative computer-aided programs in the college's biology, geology and political science departments.

The Department of Biology received a grant in the amount of $11,833 for microcomputer-assisted laboratory stations for undergraduate physiology courses.

"These stations would be capable of collecting, displaying and printing data from physiological experiments, including those in muscle contraction, reflex function, skin responses, cardiography and biofeedback," says Associate Professor of Biology Alfred Warren Hanson, director of the project.

A $14,200 NSF grant will allow the college's Department of Geology to purchase equipment to conduct photographic image analysis in the natural and social sciences.

The major piece of equipment to be purchased for this project, a zoom transfer stereoscope, will allow students full use of the college's outstanding collection of historical aerial photographs, the Fairchild Aerial Photography Collection.

"This instrument allows all types of images to be compared by matching scales and removing distortions—information on an image can be transferred to special-purpose maps," explains Dallas Rhodes, associate professor of geology.

Students of geology, biology and sociology will be able to apply the technology to their work in analyzing the progress of geological features; mapping vegetation, habitats or environments; and analyzing urban development and demographics, according to Rhodes, project director.

The college's Department of Political Science is the beneficiary of a $15,008 NSF grant that will make it possible for students to plug into the state-of-the-art International Negotiation Project network, a computer simulation of foreign policy decision making. Participants worldwide communicate through a central computer at the University of Maryland, sending and receiving messages via this network.

"For the students, this enhances the sense of realism," says Joyce Kaufman, assistant professor of political science. "Whittier College is now equipped to offer its students the perspectives, skills and body of knowledge that will better prepare them to meet the international challenges that lie ahead."

A total of 970 grant proposals were submitted to the NSF in 1987. In California, 28 proposals were funded. The three received by Whittier were as many as were received by any single college or university in the state. □

1195 CLUB, The Whittier College Athletic Support Group

The 1195 Club has begun the year with the annual football spaghetti dinner, where Coach Hugh Mendez introduces his team to the members and discusses the prospects for the season. In addition to the spaghetti dinner, regular luncheons are held nearly every Monday during the fall, where members are brought up to date on the progress of all of the fall sports by Director of Athletics Dave Jacobs.

Tom Hunt '37 serves as president of the 1195 Club, with Buck Jarnagan '48 serving as vice president. Current board members include John Arrambide '35, Myron Claxton '40, Bob Clift '40, Herman Fink '35, Betty (Hibbard) Kenworthy '45, Richard Boline '67, Morris Padia '42, Jim Perry '35, John Price '50, Dick Thomson '34, Michael Brown '79, Dean Crowley '56, Donald Henderson '40, David Newell '69 and Gordon Pedersen '50.

The 1195 Club was formed in the '50s as an athletic support group. Dues are $20 per year (or $50 per year for a family membership) and provide for all trophies, many awards banquets and much needed equipment for intercollegiate sports. Members receive a season pass for two to all home athletic events, sports schedules and a bi-monthly newsletter. The club sponsors the annual 1195 Club "Hall of Fame" Golf Tournament, which supports the Hall of Fame and sports programs on campus. Club events include luncheons which are held most Mondays during the fall, some in the spring, the Spring Sports Luncheon, the All Sports Awards Luncheon, the golf tournament, the Coaches in the Field Dinner and many sports teams banquets.

If you're interested in sports and want to learn more about the 1195 Club, contact the Alumni Office. □

Alumni Association Plans Trip to China

Dr. Robert Marks, vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculty, has agreed to lead Whittier College alumni and friends on a tour of the Republic of China in October, 1988. Plans call for the tour to include visits to Hong Kong, Beijing, Shanghai and Xi'an.

Participants will see the Great Wall, the Yangtze River, local color of Hong Kong, the tombs, the temples, the ruins, the pogodas, the people, the history of China. Dr. Marks, a specialist in Chinese history, is the perfect choice as a guide on this spectacular study tour. For further information, contact the Alumni Office.

Alumni Clubs

The fall season for the Alumni Clubs has been filled with a variety of interesting events.

The Northern California Alumni Club enjoyed a wonderful afternoon pot luck barbecue and wine tasting last spring at Dr. Max McPherson's '23 in Napa. Librarian Phil O'Brien '61 spoke to the group briefly about the Jessamyn West collection housed at the college. Ann Farmer '56, Whittier English professor, and Beth (Nelson) Fernandez '82, assistant alumni director, were also in attendance. In the fall, the Northern California Alumni Club members were again treated to a barbecue and social, this time hosted by Trustee Robert Kennedy '37 and Mrs. Barbara (Todd) Kennedy '37 in Atherton, on Saturday, Oct. 3.

Also on Oct. 3, the San Diego Alumni Club gathered at the University of San Diego for a tailgate picnic and to cheer the Poet football squad on to greater effort as they played the University of San Diego Toreros. The San Diego Club is headed by Barbara (Ondrasik) Groce '57. Hosting the committee at their first meeting of the year was Captain Bill Kelley '60, who invited the committee aboard his flagship, the U.S.S. David R. Ray, for a breakfast meeting.

In Boston on Oct. 8, the East Coast Alumni were invited to a special reception aboard the Royal Odyssey cruise ship, meeting with a tour of Whittier alumni who were cruising the Maritime Provinces and New England with Whittier College professor, Dr. Richard Archer. Susie (Elliott) Harvey '67, alumni director, and her husband, Wayne Harvey '60, hosted the event.

On Saturday, Oct. 17, art was the focus as the Whittier West Club visited the J. Paul Getty

Alumni Soccer Game

An alumni soccer game, organized by Kevin Buckel '82, provided several of the college's former soccer players the opportunity to meet on Sept. 5, and engage in some friendly rivalry with the current Whittier College team. The alumni team: (front row, left to right) Jose Lazalde '82, Mario Carrasco '79, Ramon Franco, Kevin Buckel '82, Doug Sanchez '84, Joe Chavez '82. Back row, left to right: Anton Goetz '82, James Hunt '79, Tony Galvan '79, Peter Keks '80, Sam Strgacich '80, Alex Gutierrez '79, Orlando Brenes '78.

Museum in Malibu following a brunch at Gladstones For Fish. Co-chairmen for the Whittier West event were Dr. Patricia (Hare) Streeter '58, and her husband Dr. Earl Streeter '57.

The first of November found the San Gabriel Valley Alumni Club at Santa Anita Race Track for the Oak Tree Meet under the leadership of Gloria (Platenberg) Larkin '50.

The Orange County Club, on Sunday, Nov. 8, took a military tack. Their plans called for lunch at the El Toro Marine Station, followed by a tour of that facility, arranged by Velma (Ramsey) '42 and Jack Scott '42.

Dinner theater visits seem to be a hot idea for the clubs. The Southbay Club has scheduled a dinner theatre trip in Torrance on Nov. 14, and the Central Coast Club is working on the same idea in Cambria in early December. Richard Reese '49 will be chairing the Southbay event, and Jim '47 and Marion (Gage) Abrecht '48 are chairing the Central Coast Club event.

A brunch and organizing party was held Nov. 8 for a Ventura-Santa Barbara Club in early November with the assistance of Marion (Thomas) Goe '77. If you live in this area and are interested in helping with the planning of alumni events, let us know. All volunteers are welcome!

Club events are open to all Whittier College alumni, friends and family. If a particular club event interests you, call the Alumni Office for further information. ☐

Going Out a Winner

Ray Canton points out former students.

Pictures, plaques and Page Ones line every inch of wall in The Channels newsroom.

The wall and the people it represents are Ray Canton's living legacy to Santa Barbara City College and the hundreds of students he's honed into professionals who are making their mark in all areas of journalism.

Canton, an SBCC journalism instructor for the past 22 years, is the driving force behind The Channels, the school's award-winning newspaper.

But now he's written a -30- (journalism jargon for the end of the story) to a newspaper career that began at the age of 15 with a football story, written out in longhand, for the Downey Union High School Live Wire.

Under Canton's tutelage, The Channels won two national Pacemaker Awards—college journalism's version of the Pulitzer Prize—in 1981 and 1984. The newspaper also has won seven first-place and one second-place community college General Excellence Awards from the California Newspaper Publishers Association. The Channels also has earned an All-American honor rating for 37 consecutive semesters from the Associated Collegiate Press at the University of Minnesota.

Writing a retirement story about Ray Canton the person isn't easy. All he wants to talk about are his "stars," alumni nicknamed the "holy triumvirate" and the "Flash." These are a few of the nicknames given to outstanding staffers who've gone on to the journalistic major leagues around the nation.

In a biography under "Flash" Tom Kelsey's picture is a prediction that the fledgling photographer would win a Pulitzer Prize. Eight years later, the 1974 graduate who now works for the Los Angeles Times, did just that.

"They're my friends, my very best friends. Thanks to them we've never missed a deadline," said Canton, using his cane to point out the face to go with each non-stop story about his "kids."

The cane is a bothersome help to an energetic 68-year-old who's been an avid jogger most of his life and was still doing several miles a day when forced to undergo emergency surgery for an aneurysm in the groin about a year ago. "When I woke up after the surgery it suddenly struck me that I was fighting for my life," Canton said. "But I was one of the lucky ones, I had a warning."

Then last fall he reinjured two crushed vertebrae. It wasn't life-threatening, "but the pain was so excruciating I couldn't even lift a dictionary," said the educator, who's such a stickler about misspelled words that each one that makes it into a story earns a mark on a student's grade sheet. "That's when I began toying with the idea of retirement. My wife, Betty, (who's retired from teaching) has been very understanding, but this job demands 80, 90, and sometimes even 100 hours a week."

Sharon L. Jones, a former News-Press staffer who followed her SBCC mentor to Columbia University and earned a master's degree with honors, gave Canton an insight that finally convinced him. "You're a winner, go out a winner, she told me, and I decided to listen," Canton said. While at the prestigious journalism school he earned the first $1,000 Grantland Rice Fellowship for sportswriting.

"Sharon was managing editor in 1980-81 and she's the best teammate I've ever had," Canton said. She now is an Associated Press reporter in San Diego.

Another student, Michael Parfit, has written three books and is working on the fourth, "Reader's Digest, Smithsonian, you name it and his work has appeared in it. And then there's Mary Ellen Hickey, the most important person we ever had," Canton said. She served as business manager for The Channels in 1978-79, a position that "makes it all work." Despite the cost of having the paper printed off-campus, The Channels always has operated in the black.

Mark Patton, News-Press sportswriter, received a full scholarship from USC, an expensive school that he'd have been unable to attend without financial aid. "Without Ray Canton's personal touch, a scholarship would have been impossible for me," Patton recalls.

"A lot of teachers would write a letter or make a phone call for you, but he'd actually go down there in person to plead your case. I think that made a big impression on the people at USC." Canton's interest in his students doesn't end at graduation. "I've been out now for 13 years, and to this day he's shown a great interest in my career," Patton said.

Aside from the laurels earned by The Channels, Canton won a national honor in 1985—Distinguished Adviser for Two-Year Colleges from the College Media Advisers of the Associated Collegiate Press, and in 1969 was named the state's outstanding junior college journalism professor. He received the state's "Outstanding Journalism Educator Award" from the California Newspaper Publishers Association in 1970 and 1983. Canton is the only person to receive the award twice.

Dr. Peter MacDougall, superintendent and president at SBCC, describes Canton as a person who epitomizes the finest in education "The thing that strikes me so deeply is his total dedication to teaching. To see the way his students mean so much to him is like watching a special flower blooming," said MacDougall.

"Ray Canton created an institution at SBCC that has consistently been one of the top five college papers in the country," said Linda Egan, News-Press editorial page editor and former Channels staffer. "It will take two or three people wrapped into one to replace him," she said. "The thing that's wonderful about Ray is that he set his standards of performance so high and never compromised them."

The only child of a poor family that believed strongly in education, Canton was in the "bad boys class" during most of his high school years until Muriel Powell, a perceptive teacher, "decided I might have some writing talent."

History has proved her point. While attending Whittier College, Canton worked for the Daily News [the Quaker Campus] on campus. After a stint in the army he worked for the Chicago Tribune, the Minneapolis Tribune and the Sacramento Bee.

"I've always felt my biggest professional mistake was leaving the Chicago Tribune. There was no better paper in those days, and I doubt there is now, that matched the Tribune in craftsmanship," said Canton.

Quality is an important part of Canton's personal lifestyle. "I try to provide the kids with a quality experience at a young age, so they get some exposure to it. If they never have it again, they've at least had it here."

One attribute Canton finds lacking in some of today's crop of young journalists is dedication. "They may be a whole lot brighter, but I've seen a sharp decline in dedication. The star students are the ones who work like hell and have a good attitude," he said. Canton feels it has been most evident in his classes since the early 1980s. "I'm not a philosopher, but I think it reflects the times we live in; it probably reflects the home as much as anything.

"That's why I have mixed emotions about sports. You sit for hour after hour watching or going to these games, but there are other, more exciting things. I will always be appreciative of sports, because I think it keeps you out of trouble at one stage in your life, gives you some goals, but to just be saturated with sports is not something worthwhile," Canton said.

He cites a lack of editorial leadership as the weakest link in journalism today. "To be a leader you have to give yourself up. I found that in too many cases people wanted the promotions for themselves and they didn't give a damn about the people who were supposed to be under their jurisdiction.

"All I ever wanted to do was be a reporter, and as an educator I only wanted to be a teacher. I'm not interested in being an administrator. So many of those coveting management positions become a nuisance," he said.

The big thrill in teaching has been to "see them go on and far exceed what they anticipated. I admit I'll miss the excitement of the continual deadlines—there's still a lot of the old workhorse in me—but I'll be content if some of my ex-students simply remember me as someone who gave it his best effort." □

George C. Parker '40, while sorting through some family documents, came across a bit of Whittier College history contained in "The Parker Christmas Letter" written in 1923 by his grandfather, Clarkson H. Parker. He shares this account of the College event in 1923: "A local interest creating much attention here above everything else, is the John Greenleaf Whittier Banquet at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, a $100,000 banquet in the interest of Whittier College. The aim is to sell 1,000 plates at $100 each. The chief speaker will be William G. McAdoo and Madame Schuman Heink will sing. The governor of the state may be there."

Georgia Beth Cates '41, is an active volunteer in the AARP's TAX AIDE Program. She holds a prestigious position as local coordinator in the area of Dolores, Colo., and has participated in this program for four years.

Fred Dukes '47, who lives in Bakersfield, recently was awarded the Alfred Harrell Man of the Year Award—the most prestigious award given by Kern County's Volunteer Center—for his impressive record of volunteer community service in 1986. "Fred's volunteer activities are far more widespread than just service to agencies and his number of volunteer hours are impossible to calculate," according to a Volunteer Center summary of Fred's activities. Over the past year Fred participated in community beautification, church and civic activities, assisting the needy, senior citizens and youth. "Fred Dukes is that rare person who is willing to accept the menial jobs which need to be done as well as the prestige positions," the Volunteer Center administrator wrote. "One often finds him working in the kitchen, serving meals, at the telephone to find help for a needy family, taking meeting minutes, compiling newsletters at the typewriter, and handling many other time-consuming tasks."

Bill Witthuhn '50 and Margaret (Frees '53) Whitthuhn report that they relocated from Monroe, Wash., to Everett, Wash., so that their daughter, Brenda, could compete in a nearby high school swim program. The Witthuhns evidently made the right move. Brenda went on to win the coaches' award and went to the state meet as a member of the championship team. Bill enclosed several newspaper clippings "to verify the statements of a proud father."

Walter Nelson '53, inspired by a look at his college yearbooks, writes that John Whitcomb '57 and Mary (Sadler '55) DeYoung are teaching in the Upland Unified School District, from which he has retired. Walter recalls, "All the guys used to flock across the street to the drugstore at Philadelphia and Painter (where Bob's Big Boy is now) to watch Mary, behind the counter, pour coffee."

Dr. Manuel Gallegos '55 has recently been selected by Presiding Superior Court Judge Jack E. Goertzen as grand jury foreman. He will head the 23-member grand jury, which primarily conducts investigations of various governmental departments. A retired superintendent of the Downey Unified School District, Manuel has been recognized by "Alianza de Los Amigos," the College's Hispanic alumni organization.

Dr. Patricia (Hare '58) Streeter, chairperson of a career day at Montague Elementary School, recently had Poets Bob Blechen '56, William Peel '56 and Robert Kessinger, as presenters at the school's Career and College Day. Meanwhile, Patricia was installed as president of Pi Lambda Theta, Santa Monica Bay Chapter, for 1987-89. Dr. Earl Streeter '57 was named historian of Pi Lambda Theta. The Streeters' daughter, Michelle, is a sophomore at UCLA where she is a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority.

Lani was subsequently invited by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig to make a presentation about her school before the State Board of Education in Sacramento.

Frank Fulkerson '71, says he is alive and well and upside down. That's because he flies a biplane in aerobatic competition. He has won one first place so far and says that flying with the wheels up and windows down is a great way to celebrate a good week at work.

Kathryn (Davies '72) Ekberg and husband Larry have returned to Southern California after their three-year assignments to Clark Air Base in the Philippines. "The opportunity to live and work in another culture in such turbulent times was an exciting and broadening experience both personally and professionally," Kathryn says. "Plus, learning to shop in six languages while traveling throughout Asia was great fun." She is currently an Air Force procurement analyst at the Ballistic Missile Office, and enjoying being a new mom.

Lou Moret '72 a former private sector executive and public agency director, was recently named chief operating officer of the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG). SCAG is an association of city and county governments dedicated to providing a forum which gives members the opportunity to reach agreement and implement policies on issues of

'77. Let's start with Jan. After she and husband Michael earned B.S. degrees in forestry from Humboldt State University, they moved to Idaho. They now have two beautiful children and are preparing to move back to California. Both of them are active at their local church.

Colleen Cross '77 is activities director for a high school and currently living in Fountain Valley where she is leading her typically busy life.

Karen Johnsen '77 spent a month in the Soviet Union last summer. This was her fourth visit to the country.

Margie Oswald-Humes '77 still lives in Parkville, MO, with husband Alan. She works full time and sings with Sweet Adelines.

Gail Hirata '77 is back on the LPGA tour.

Joyce (Johnson '77) Mullenbach is still working for Union Bank. She and her husband Pete are enjoying their freedom after the sale of their car wash last year.

Betty (Koo '77) and Art Piggot '76 are enjoying their new home in Yorba Linda. Betty is still working for La Mirada Hospital (10 years now!). Their second baby was born in October.

Nancy (Hague '77) Shippy lives in Tempe, Ariz., with husband Wayne and their five glorious children. Needless to say, they have a busy life.

Tracy (Crawford '78) Hamilton is busy chasing around baby daughter Robin. Husband, Gary just received a promotion which may take the family to San Diego.
